Finding our edge at the edge of what's possible

Mishcon de Reya

Why should people believe this is a different kind of law firm?

Why should clients want to engage us?

Why should people want to come and work here?

When I bleed, they bleed

Mishcon lawyers serve you with an extra level of commitment, we treat client problems as they were our own urgent, personal concerns.

We know that business starts with human beings.

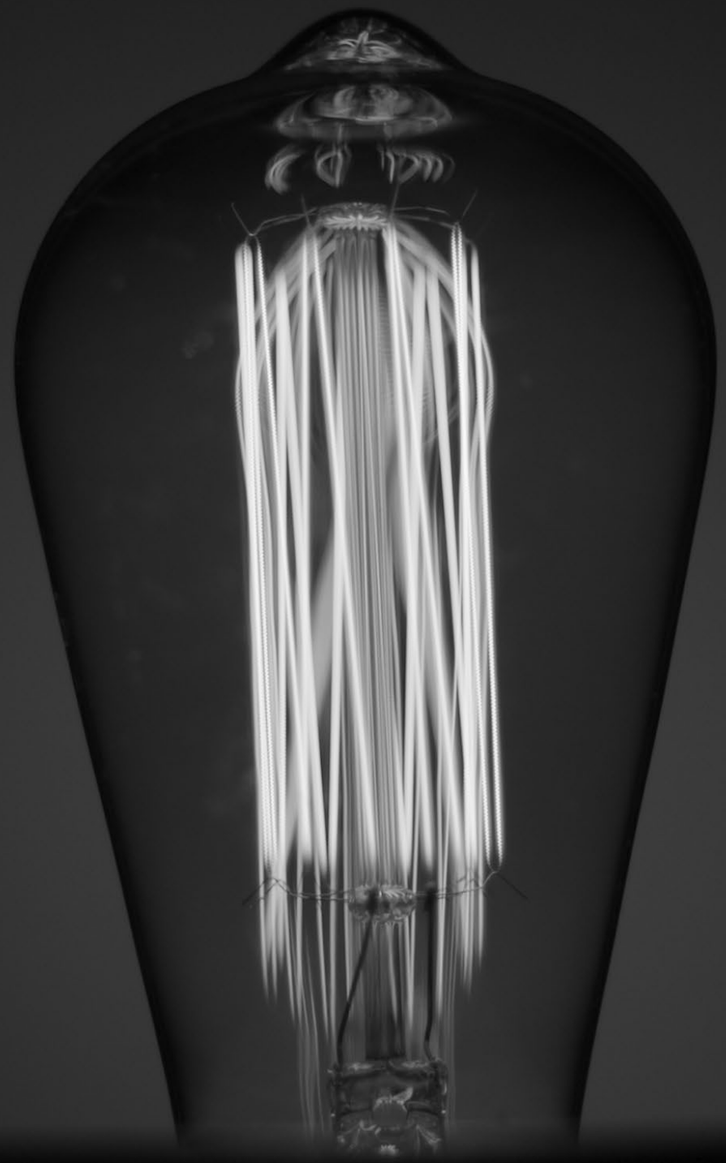

We focus on the person and understanding them so we can offer the best advice and deliver the best outcomes.

We are natural collaborators. Because we focus on people, convening and connecting comes naturally.

Diversity of thought, diversity of personality produces a better environment, more motivated people and more effective lawyers.

We are creative.
We grew our business from one man in a small office above a bank in Brixton.

Inventive.
Resourceful.
Broad-minded.

We don’t just look after our clients,
we fiercely guard their interests.

We are interested in and engaged with the world around us.

Which enables us to offer better advice.

Which is why we have always fought for social justice, throughout our history.
Which is why we have a dedicated place for in-house learning.

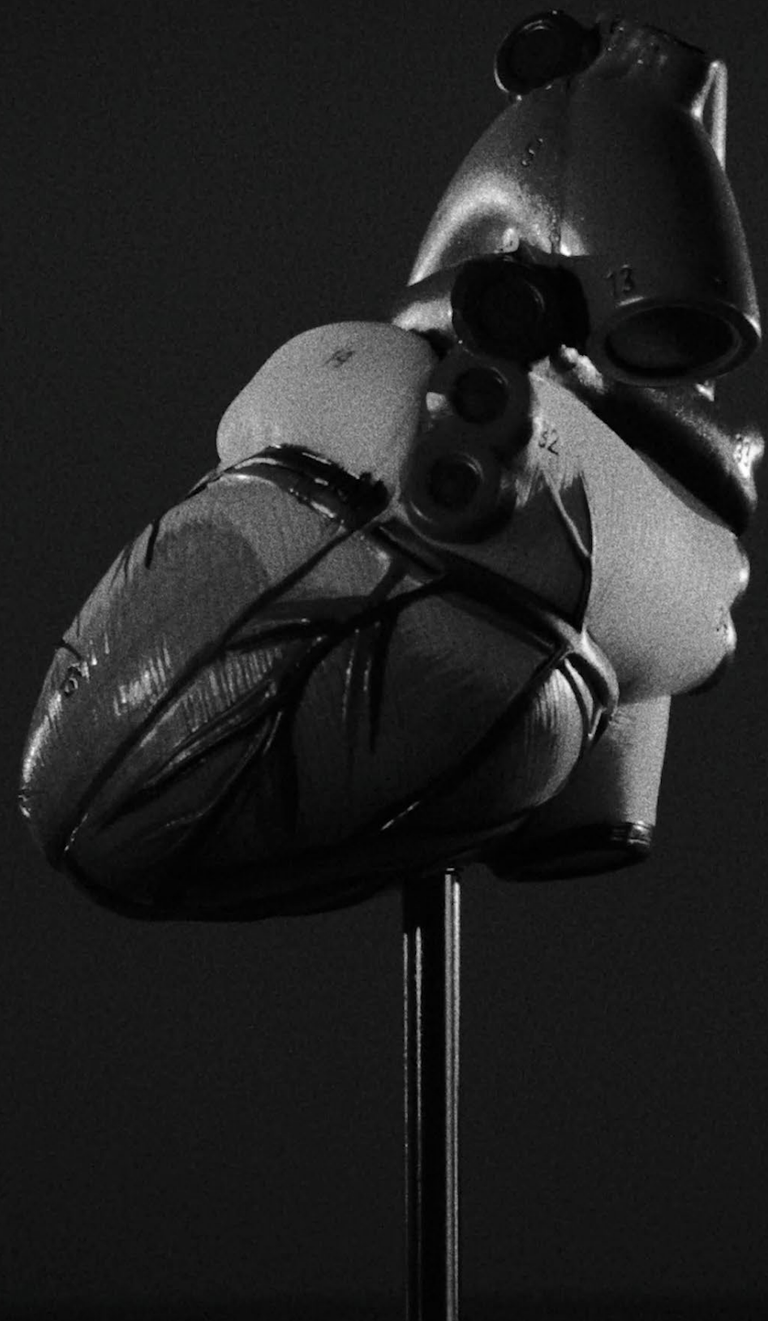

Which means we throw a great party.

Delivering excellence

for private individuals, start-ups and large institutions.

Genuinely putting our clients first.
An extra level of personal investment.
Laser focus on achieving the best possible outcomes.

Thinking creatively in an uncertain world.

With inimitable intelligence, with unquestionable integrity,

we find our edge
at the edge of what's possible.
